Just a cold

piece of lead,

A flattened,

battered

piece of lead.

So harmless now,

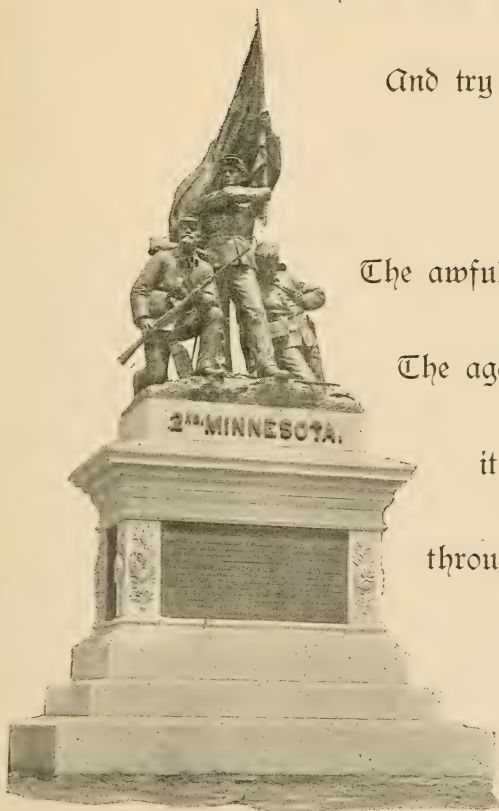

On what a cruel

mission

Once it sped.

And what a history concealed,
That might to us be now revealed
Had it the voice
To tell the witnessed woes
It now holds sealed.

I hold it still within my hand

And try for once

to understand

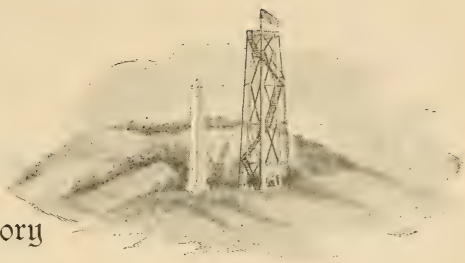

The awfulness of war;

The agony of hearts

it caused

through all

our land.

A thrilling story

it could tell

Of noble ones who nobly fell,

And by their blood

Made sacred e'er

This peaceful spot

where now

we dwell.

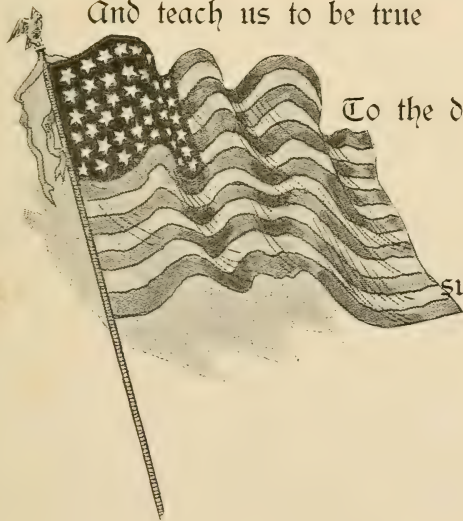

Speak, oh, cold lead,

Thou battle-battered

piece of lead,

And teach us to be true

To the dear land

for which such royal,

priceless

blood

was shed.
